On September 21, labor will march side-by-side with tens of thousands from youth, climate, environmental justice, economic justice, human rights, faith and student movements. Together we will demand an ambitious global agreement to dramatically reduce global warming pollution, to promote economic justice, good jobs, healthy communities, and to support workers and communities affected by the transition to a clean energy economy.

On September 22, the day after this historic march, we will gather in honor of the union sisters and brothers in New York and around the world who are leading the effort to build an international climate justice movement.

We invite you to join us as we celebrate the union members and leaders who helped put labor on the streets for the People’s Climate March.

At the celebration, you will have the opportunity to express solidarity and share moments of reflection and inspiration with union sisters and brothers who are on the frontlines of the global struggle for economic and ecological justice in Argentina, Brazil, Canada, India, Korea, Norway, Peru, the Philippines, South Africa, Trinidad & Tobago and the UK.

Co-sponsored by Trade Unions for Energy Democracy (TUED) a multi-partner effort involving more than 30 unions from 15 countries.

TUED is coordinated by the Cornell Global Labor Institute (a program of the Worker Institute at Cornell), in partnership with the Rosa Luxemburg Stiftung—New York Office.
